Explore!

A large group of colorful macaws, primarily red, blue, and green, are gathered on a vertical clay lick in a forest. The birds are of various species, including scarlet macaws and blue-and-yellow macaws. They are perched on the light-colored, textured clay surface, which is part of a larger rock formation. Some birds are facing the camera, while others are in profile or facing away. The background shows more of the rock formation and some green foliage at the top.
